The Funds are actively managed by DJE and, where a benchmark index is indicated, without reference to it. The presented charts and tables concerning performance are based on our own calculations according to the gross performance (BVI) method<sup>2</sup> and illustrate past development. Past performance is not indicative for future returns. The BVI method takes into account all costs incurred at the fund level (e.g. management fees), the net performance and the issue fee. Additional individual costs may be incurred at the customer level (e.g. custodian fees, commission and other charges). Model calculation (net): an investor wishes to purchase shares for Euro 1,000. With a maximum issue surcharge of 0.00%, he has to spend a one-off amount of Euro 0.00 when making the purchase. In addition, there may be custodian costs that reduce performance. The custodian costs are decided by your bank's price list and service charges

MONTHLY COMMENTARY

It became apparent on the bond markets in February that hopes of early key interest rate cuts were exaggerated. In the USA, inflation proved more stubborn than expected. For January, economists had expected inflation to fall to 2.9% compared to the same month last year, but inflation was 3.1% and core inflation (excluding energy and food) was 3.9%. The international stock markets posted strong gains, and there were also robust figures from the US labor market, as over 350,000 new jobs were created in February and the unemployment rate remained consistently low at 3.7%. In addition, the two purchasing managers' indices for services and manufacturing as leading indicators in the USA rose significantly and point to an expanding economy. Given the positive economic data, a recession in the USA should no longer be an issue this cycle. The US Federal Reserve (Fed) wants to avoid a recession on the one hand, but on the other hand wants to bring inflation towards its target of 2.0%. If developments continue like this, key interest rates are likely to be lowered later - possibly not until June - and not as often as expected. If inflation does not fall permanently to 2.0%, the Fed is likely to stop cutting interest rates again. In the euro area, the purchasing managers' index for services left recessionary territory. However, the manufacturing index unexpectedly fell even lower in February. This means that the euro area economy is likely to remain stationary in the first quarter of 2024. The inflation rate in the euro area rose by only 2.6% in February compared to the same month last year - in January it was 2.8%. This means that inflation is moving in the direction desired by the European Central Bank. If the inflation rate gets even closer to the 2% inflation target in the coming months, the ECB is likely to cut interest rates. It would be the first interest rate cut since March 2016. For these reasons, yields on 2-year German and US government bonds rose sharply. In the USA they returned 4.62%, 41 basis points higher than in the previous month and in Germany they returned 47 basis points at 2.90%. This meant that the yield curve became more inverted again because the rise in yields on 10-year government bonds was smaller. The yield on high-quality corporate bonds rose almost in parallel in the euro area and the USA, reaching 29 and 30 basis points, respectively. Only high-yield bonds developed in the opposite direction: While the yield on European high yields fell by 21 basis points to 7.29%, it rose slightly by 7 basis points to 7.86% on their US counterparts. In this market environment, the DJE - Zins Global fell by ##2024.02.29. The fund benefited from the narrowing risk premiums on high-quality, high-yield corporate bonds. In contrast, the broad rise in yields on most types of bonds weighed on the fund. During the month, the fund management reduced one bond from the utilities sector and purchased a USD-denominated bond from the pharmaceutical sector. In addition, fund management shortened the fund's duration by reducing longer-dated bonds to counteract the risk posed by rising yields. The modified duration (including cash and derivatives) remained almost unchanged at 3.31% (previous month: 3.29%). At the end of the month, the currency hedging of securities denominated in US dollars against the euro was largely reduced.

INVESTMENT APPROACH

DJE - Zins Global invests worldwide in a broadly diversified portfolio of high-quality government and corporate bonds. High-yield and emerging market bonds can be added. The selection of individual bonds depends largely on a fundamental assessment of the debtor's solvency and the corresponding yield valuation. The fund management emphasises a balanced mix of bonds with an attractive risk/reward ratio and strives to achieve an appropriate return. The currency risk of securities not denominated in euros can be partially or fully hedged depending on the market situation. The fund thus offers easy access to the global bond market and can serve as a basic investment.
